REVISED LEAD AND COPPER RULE

What Rosenberg is Doing to Comply with EPA's Recently Adopted LCRR - Lead and Copper Rule Revisions

On December 16, 2021, the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) announced the next steps to strengthen the regulatory framework on lead in drinking water.

The Lead and Copper Rule Revisions (LCRR) amend the Lead and Copper Rule. All public water systems are required to comply with the LCRR starting October 16, 2024, but the City is already taking action.

- Rosenberg is performing a lead service line inventory
- No in-service lead service lines have been identified to date
- Field verification of service lines of unknown material is underway
- Researching service line materials at all schools served by the City
- Researching service line materials at all licensed daycares served by the City

If a lead service line is identified, the City will support customers in various ways to replace the line. This is a multi-year project, and the City will keep you up-to-date on the progress being made, keep you informed with helpful information, FAQs and more.

EPA
CONCERNED ABOUT LEAD IN YOUR DRINKING WATER?

Sources of LEAD in Drinking Water

- Copper Pipe with Lead Solder: Solder made or installed before 1986 contained high lead levels.
- Faucets: Fixtures inside your home may contain lead.
- Galvanized Pipe: Lead particles can attach to the surface of galvanized pipes. Over time, the particles can enter your drinking water, causing elevated lead levels.
- Lead Service Line: The service line is the pipe that runs from the water main to the home's internal plumbing. Lead service lines can be a major source of lead contamination in water.
- Lead Goose Necks: Goose necks and pigtails are shorter pipes that connect the lead service line to the main.
